Q: Using a MySQL Trigger on Update Statements I have a table named items in which I store the item ID, item name, item price, and item price type (e.g., Item #1 is 1.5oz, $10.00, and $0.30). I want to create a trigger that updates the price_type column in the items table whenever an item is being updated. This way, whenever an item is updated, the price_type is updated to indicate the unit of the price (e.g., if an item is $10.00, the price_type will be $10.00). Here is my table: Here is my trigger: I've been trying to figure out how to get the trigger to update the column whenever an item is updated, but I'm having no luck. Here are the two lines of code in the trigger: DELIMITER $$ CREATE TRIGGER `update_price_type` AFTER UPDATE ON `items` FOR EACH ROW BEGIN UPDATE items SET price_type = NEW.item_price_type WHERE item_id = NEW.item_id; END $$ DELIMITER ; A: It should be simply CREATE TRIGGER `update_price_type` AFTER UPDATE ON `items` FOR EACH ROW BEGIN UPDATE items SET price_type = NEW.item_price_type WHERE item_id = NEW.item_id; END Without the WHERE. You're updating all rows and not only those being updated. You also don't need the NEW keyword on a column that isn't a trigger target. The role of symptom severity in the relationship between pain and gender: a review. Recent data indicate that men and women are overrepresented in populations of pain patients. These differences have been suggested to be related to gender-related differences in gender role expectation and coping behavior, as well as to psychological gender differences (i.e., masculinity vs.
