Category: SurveyingQ: What is the difference between type=text/plain and charset=UTF-8 in meta-tag In the following example what is the difference between and ? A: The second one is completely useless. The first one will be considered for HTML5 documents only, but it will be ignored for HTML4 and XHTML documents. That is why you should use the second one, so that any non-HTML5 documents will be treated the same as HTML5 documents. A: The first one will be considered only for HTML5 documents but ignored for non HTML5 (HTML4 and XHTML). The second one is useful for any kind of document. The third one will also work as long as the document is in one of the HTML5 supported charset. For further details please take a look at the following link: Also please note the following note regarding the second one Authors should not set a charset other than UTF-8 for HTML documents because browsers often incorrectly interpret documents in other character encodings and cannot reliably display the content of such documents. If a document contains a charset other than UTF-8, a browser agent is unlikely to display the document correctly. For example, a Windows installation of Firefox on a Mac can display the document "æøå". Q: Qual o uso correto do "oito" em um pedido? Tenho um pedido de "conselho de ministros" à Presidente da República da Itália. A pessoa que me faz isso pede-me oito vídeos do ministro para que os coloque nos cartões verdes da coluna do ministro da Economia (aliás, oito vídeos são a pedido do ministro das Finanças). Esta é a forma correta de dizer? ...oito vídeos do ministro (2d92ce491b
