Alvaro Morata has been directly linked with a move to Manchester United in the past week – on the back of fresh speculation that he is bound for Old Trafford to take up Anthony Martial's vacant position. With Alexis Sanchez set to complete a €60m move to Arsenal, United have made renewed enquiries to discover whether Morata is available. However, Real Madrid are unwilling to do business, while they believe United would require an initial payment of around £55m for the 25-year-old. Meanwhile, United insist Morata has not been approached but Arsenal are confident of signing the striker, whose current deal expires in 12 months' time. United won 2-1 at Stamford Bridge in the first leg of their Champions League tie with Chelsea on Tuesday night, with Morata scoring his side's second goal. And now, Sky in Italy claim Madrid are confident they can retain Morata on the basis of a £35m-a-year offer. This represents a huge step up from the £70m-a-year deal he is currently on at the Bernabeu. United are willing to keep Morata at his current price, but would face competition for his signature from PSG, who will have to wait until June to complete his transfer to France after he passed his medical. Chelsea may also have to negotiate over the fees in Morata's contract, since he signed it on the back of a £58m move from Real Madrid in 2013, when he was still on a Bosman. Should Arsenal seal the £60m deal for Sanchez, it will leave United with room for only one marquee signing this summer, after they spent £71m on the transfer of Romelu Lukaku from Everton in the summer.

Q: Aligning div's within a container I have a container div "container" and four divs inside. the problem is, those div's' alignments are not on the same horizontal line. please help.
