Tadaaa! My first review here and I'm sure my first with iOS as well! It's a great app to find and download stuff for an android phone, though sometimes the images you download don't match the ones you're seeing in the game, but sometimes they're actually better. Anyway, enough of that, let's get to the review! The App The app is built around a simple, but neat concept: let's you download more than 100 different apps to your phone and then you use them to make your phone feel like a Supercomputer. The interface is very simple: you start with one of the apps, the one you downloaded to your phone, and then you get a little window for each app you wish to activate. You can choose from Google Maps, Waze, Spotify, Facebook, Twitter, Whatsapp and Youtube. Let's get to the apps Spotify It's very interesting how Spotify doesn't know anything about my podcast history. I only had one podcast in my profile and that one was not added. It's a shame for that... Youtube Downloaded all the movies I like! Facebook Downloaded the recipe with my wife's cakes! Waze When I reached home I was worried about how many people passed by. Waze: 0. Google Maps The perfect app for when the GPS stops working! WIFI Woah, even the app doesn't know my connection! Twitter There's also an official twitter app in this list! Cool! Android is a dangerous OS to review apps on. Especially when I'm tired and use my tablet while driving. Still, I'm gonna give it a shot! Possibly one of the best apps on android for a long time. It has a great interface, lots of features and is absolutely free. You also get the benefit of syncing to the Facebook account of the user who has the app on their phone. Basically there is an app
