Levels of serum soluble CD23 and chemokines in HIV-1 infection in comparison to inflammation and rheumatoid arthritis. Although the use of chemokines is increasing in the management of rheumatoid arthritis (RA), the involvement of the chemokine system in HIV-1 infection is still not clear. In this study we examined whether chemokine levels in serum are altered in HIV-1 infection and investigate the role of these chemokines in the pathogenesis of HIV-1 infection. We found that serum soluble CD23 (sCD23) levels are significantly higher in HIV-1 infected patients than in patients with other inflammatory diseases and controls. We also found that CXCL8, CCL17 and CCL18 are increased in serum of patients with HIV-1 infection in a similar pattern as observed for sCD23. The data indicate that the chemokine system is involved in HIV-1 infection, and that CD23 is a marker in HIV-1 infection and that the chemokine system may be used to follow the progression of HIV-1 infection in vivo.
