Chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD) is one of the most prevalent chronic diseases. Its clinical diagnosis is based on symptoms, functional and imaging tests. An important part of the diagnostic process in Primary Care is the carbon dioxide (CO<sub>2</sub>) pulmonary function test (PFT), which is a useful tool to assess the bronchial obstruction. The aim of this study was to assess the diagnostic value of the PFT, and its agreement with the COPD diagnostic criteria, in the detection of COPD in the primary care setting. We have also compared the clinical value of the use of the CO<sub>2</sub> PFT with the post-bronchodilator spirometry in the detection of COPD. A retrospective, analytical, observational study of the medical records of patients diagnosed with COPD in the year 2014 in a Primary Care centre. We have analysed patient's demographic variables, clinical variables, and the agreement between the CO<sub>2</sub> PFT and the COPD diagnostic criteria and post-bronchodilator spirometry. A total of 497 patients were included in the study, 91.4% of them had been diagnosed as having COPD (COPD Global Initiative (GOLD) I - 104, GOLD II - 38, GOLD III - 11, GOLD IV - 58,

What's New In SleepWalker?

SleepWalker is a lightweight software application whose purpose is to help you automatically shut down your computer with a customizable timer. Look for the tool in the system tray At the end of the installation process, you can find the program residing in your system tray area. With a right-click on its icon you can quickly enable several tasks, like shut down or restart the computer, log off the current user, power off the monitor, or activate the hibernation mode. Set up the timer SleepWalker gives you the possibility to automate a shutdown session by specifying the time and number of seconds in which the action can be cancelled. What's more, you can run the utility at Windows startup and reassign hotkeys for shutting down or restarting the computer, entering hibernation, logging off the current user, powering down the monitor, and running the screensaver. The program lets you configure multiple timers to perform diverse actions (e.g. shut down the PC, run a file, activate the screensaver) at a certain time and on specific days of the week. Plus, you can make the tool force a computer shutdown. A shutdown session can also be activated in case the computer is detected as being idle for a custom number of minutes. Plus, you can manually specify a time interval when the shutdown mode is disabled. Extra settings You are given the freedom to play a user-defined sound notification (MP3, WAV, OGG) when an event occurs and carry out several cleaning tasks during the reboot, shutdown or logoff procedure, like emptying the Recycle Bin and clearing Windows temporary files, recently used documents list, and Internet Explorer temporary files, cookies and history. Other important settings worth being mentioned allow you to password-protect the app in order to make sure other users cannot alter your timer's settings, and enable logging. Final verdict All things considered, SleepWalker comes with a reliable set of features for helping you work with an automated shutdown timer. The intuitive layout makes it ideal for rookies and professionals alike. Note: SleepWalker only works on NT-based platforms. 2.
