Now I have realized that I made a mistake with foo. I have added another foo, and i would like to overwrite the old foo. How can i do that? Do I have to revert, or can i just overwrite? Thanks in advance. PS: one thing that comes to mind is to cherry-pick the commit where I added foo. But does this work with git 1.5.5.2? A: You should git commit -a -m "foo" to discard the foo you previously added. The invention generally relates to the field of radiation metrology, and more specifically to a x-ray measuring device for determining radiation properties of a radiation target. X-ray metrology is used for the analysis of materials, materials components, and/or other objects, which have been irradiated by an x-ray beam. In the process, the intensity and spectrum of the irradiated x-ray beam is determined, for example, in order to qualify test material for further processing. The beam can be directed to the test object by an x-ray source, which radiates the x-ray beam onto the test object. In the course of this process, the intensity of the x-ray beam is measured and evaluated. Such measuring devices can be used for the measurement of the intensity, size, and/or spectrum of an x-ray beam, for example. The x-ray beam is produced by an x-ray tube, which conventionally has an anode and a cathode. The x-ray tube converts a supply voltage into an electrical current in order to generate an electron beam. When the electron beam reaches the cathode, the x-ray tube emits x-rays due to atomic transitions. The x-ray tube usually has an anode disk that is driven at high frequency in order to generate the electron beam. On a radially outward-facing side of the anode disk, the electron beam impinges on an 570a42141b
