Download GameHouse Game collection for PC.NBA Wiretap: Five things to watch after Year-End awards Arron Afflalo, C, Orlando Magic: The All-Star Game is quickly approaching, meaning Afflalo needs to step up his game. He's started off the season with a career-high 25 points against the Denver Nuggets, and is coming off a 28-point performance in a overtime win over the Sacramento Kings. Afflalo struggled early in the season to find his groove, but has since become one of the most consistent scorers in the league. Blake Griffin, F, Los Angeles Clippers: After missing the first three games of the season due to knee surgery, Griffin has helped the Clippers stay afloat in the early going. So far this season, Griffin has struggled to find his range from the perimeter, but is getting more comfortable making threes. So far this season, Griffin is shooting 36.5 percent from beyond the arc and has been putting up at least 14 points in four out of five games. Derrick Williams, F, New York Knicks: The Oklahoma City Thunder aren't the only Oklahoma City residents who can run. Williams spent his summer training in Oklahoma City
