IGWT/IGSM, ISA100, RC3/NX\RC4, MYWAY, Hostmaster, NT\4x4 The application will also need an autorun for the IGWT and ISA100 cards, and a menu to select the other cards to be added to autorun. I'm new to the Windows world, and have come up with a list of all the possible software that could be used in conjunction with each card. Does anyone have any suggestions on how I could accomplish this? That way we'll have minimum downtime, and maybe avoid the situation where the cable company claims no such program is available and charges for the cost of the call? Thanks

The ISA100 is a Digital Automatic Meter Reading/Data Modem technology capable of receiving analog transmissions from meters, and sending new meter readings to a host computer. There are several different ways to receive meter data: From an existing synchronous or synchronous and asynchronous ISA100 unit, either via the connection module or by using a telephone line. Existing meters that are connected to the host can be updated by sending new recordings to the host. From an asynchronous ISA100, only. New meter readings can be acquired and sent to the host, either from the synchronous or asynchronous card, or from the connection module. If the telephone line is not used, then the readings can be acquired from the synchronous and asynchronous card via a direct connection, or from the telephone line via an ISA100 connection module. It can't send new readings to the host, but to a central unit, either via the ISA100 connection module or the RJ45 network cable, connected to an ISA100 network link. Has an ISA100 network link, and has RJ45 network cable, you can receive readings from the ISA100. The myway software will receive the readings, using the ISA100 connection module. Note: The convenience meter reading card, the installation card, and the remote card are physically connected together, to use one card, which is connected to either the telephone line or the ISA
